STONE PILE UNLIGHTED
 President Beach, of Storrs, Thrown From Automobile at South Manchester.

Charles L. Beach, president of the Connecticut Agricultural College, figured in an automobile accident at South Manchester Thursday evening, and as a result of which he is now laid up at his home on Faculty Row, Storrs, with injuries that are painful, although not serious. President Beach had been to Hartford on a business trip and was on his way back to this city when he drove his car onto a pile of trap-rock which had been dumped by the side of the road for state use. Mr. Beach did not notice the obstruction until he was right on top of it, and in attempting to turn off to the left his machine overturned.

That there was a mistake on the part of someone connected with the state highway department is evidenced by the fact that there had been no lights placed on the pile of rock. The selectmen of the town of Manchester, who were in session at the time were acquainted of the mishap and the highway committee immediately investigated. They were of the opinion that blame could not be put on the selectmen but that it was up to the state officials.

As a result of the accident Mr. Beach was cut over the right eye by broken glass from the windshield, while his left hand and left leg sustained bruises. He was treated by a physician at Storrs and later in the evening went to his home in Storrs in another car. His machine was hauled to a nearby garage to be repaired.
